“The Best Irises For Southern Gardens”

THE BEST IRISES FOR THE SOUTH

Not all varieties of bearded Iris are adapted to those sections of the South subject to late spring freezes, following an open, mild winter. The more tender varieties will not endure a freezing temperature after they have started growth and are full of sap. If not entirely destroyed, the buds are killed so they will not bloom, they are very likely to become infected with disease and ultimately die out. I have lost hundreds from this cause and have eliminated all such from my list as being too unsatisfactory to recommend to my customers. Those listed below have been thoroughly tried out and may be counted on as being the most constant bloomers, growing and blooming year after year, in spite of unusual weather conditions.

Set Irises in a well-drained, sunny situation. Sweeten the soil with lime, wood ashes and bonemeal. Use old plaster freely if you can get it. Partial shade is desirable for the lighter colors to prevent their fading from too much sunlight.

Avoid animal fertilizers or rotted vegetable matter. Use commercial fertilizers sparingly, acid phosphate only. Too rank a growth will induce diseased conditions and flowers will be sacrificed to foliage. Cultivate shallow, keep out grass and weeds. Ask for further information if wanted.

Sunny Brae Iris Gardens are situated four miles east of Jasper, at the foot of Sharp Top Mountain, in the sub-division known as Grand View. Turn right at the Archer Hotel, proceed on the Tate Mountain Estate road and follow the signs. Visitors are always welcome. May is the best time to see the plants in full bloom.

Fine standard varieties at 10c each, 3 for 25c, 5 for 35c, 10 for 60c, 20 for $1.00. You may select 10 from the list below and I will add 15 of my own selection, all different, 25 in all, labeled, for $1.00. Only mature blooming size rhizomes sent.

Bearded Irises may be divided and reset at any time except when blooming. The best time for planting is August and September when they are dormant and are beginning to make new roots and side shoots, then on till the ground freezes. Send in your order early so as to be sure of getting the varieties you most want. Stock of popular varieties is soon exhausted, and late buyers may have to wait another year for the choicest kinds|
